Hoopeston attorney named to Illinois Trial Lawyers board

A Hoopeston man was one of two attorneys recently elected to the Illinois Trial Lawyers Association board of managers.

Paul T. Manion of Hoopeston, along with Joseph W. Phebus, Urbana, were two of only eleven attorneys outside the Chicago metropolitan area elected to the board.

Manion founded the firm of Manion, Devens & McFetridge, Ltd., with offices in Hoopeston and Danville, in 1967.

He has concentrated in various phases of trial work, state and federal trial and appellate courts in eastern Illinois. Manion has taught courses or lectured on various phases of the law at Illinois colleges and has taught numerous trial-related courses at legal seminars.

He was also selected as one of Illinois' leading attorneys by a survey conducted by American Research Corporation in 1996.

Two other members of Manion's firm are active in the Illinois Trial Lawyers Association. Charles J. Devens is a member of the Workers' Compensation Committee and James D. Spiros is a member of the Medical Malpractice Committee.

The Illinois Trial Lawyers Association is a statewide organization devoted to assuring people injured in accidents that they are fairly compensated. It sponsors numerous seminars and programs to assist trial lawyers in perfecting trial skills.
